

WOMAN AGAINST WOMAN

Fight Over the Possession of Bertha Law.

HER SENSATIONAL STORY

MAKES VERY SERIOUS CHARGES AGAINST HER MOTHER.

Supreme Court Decisions In Three Cases—Sealed Verdict In the Damage Suit of Dr. Smith Against the City—Crown Point Injunction Case Argued—Court Notes.

Two women appeared in Judge Hiles' court yesterday and inaugurated a bitter fight for the possession of Bertha Law, who, a few days ago, asked a petition in the probate court, asking that Mrs. Retta Callahan be appointed her guardian, alleging cruel and inhuman treatment as the cause for her act. When the petition came up for hearing yesterday the girl's mother, Mrs. Anna Callahan, appeared and entered a vigorous protest against her daughter being placed in the custody of Mrs. Callahan. Both sides made sensational charges against each other. Judge Anderson represented the petitioner, who was first placed on the stand. Bertha Law is a comely miss of 18 summers, and made an excellent impression on the stand.

The following orders were made by Judge Hiles: Mrs. Callahan to return to her home at once, and to refrain from any further acts of violence against her daughter. Mrs. Callahan was ordered to pay the costs of the proceedings. The girl was ordered to remain in the custody of her mother.

She began by relating the cruel treatment to which she had been subjected at her mother's hands. A short time ago, she said, her mother beat her over the head and body with a strap, at the same time charging her with wickedness, and saying that it would not be a surprise to see her on Commercial street before long. The mother, she said, called her names generally, and told her to go to the devil, as well as a host of other vile epithets.

"I have frequently been compelled to accompany my mother to houses of ill-fame, when on her rounds collecting clothes to wash," continued the girl, "and I often saw men and women together drinking and smoking."

Upon cross-examination, witness testified that she might have been guilty of disobedience at times, but that she was very fond of her mother, and that she was very good.

Mrs. Retta Callahan, when the girl was a child, she said, was a very good mother, and she was very fond of her. She was very kind to her, and she was very good to her.

John Sheffield and W. I. Frank corroborated the girl and Mrs. Callahan as to the cruel treatment administered to the girl by the mother.

This constituted the case for the plaintiff, and Mrs. Callahan took the stand. She said she had no memory of the case, and would like very much to be represented by one, so that she could set up a good fight against the attempt to take her girl away. Judge Hiles recognized her position and appointed Judge Henderson as her counsel.

Mrs. Callahan was then heard in her defense. She said she was a very good mother, and she was very kind to her. She was very good to her, and she was very good to her.

The case was then adjourned until next Saturday, when the defense will have its turn. Mrs. Callahan was then heard in her defense. She said she was a very good mother, and she was very kind to her. She was very good to her, and she was very good to her.
